K12 Potters Council Award Winners

BY LORI LEARY, Potters Council Advisory Board and Awards Committee Chair

One of the highlights of my NCECA experience each year is visiting the National K-12 Ceramic Exhibition. Every year, I am always thrilled to see the creativity and craftsmanship displayed in this exhibition. I am hoping I will be able to see these student's work as they mature for many years to come.

Along with three other members of the Potters Council Board, I had the happy (and difficult!) task to pick four pieces to receive an annual award sponsored by the Potters Council. Awards are given to the top elementary, middle, and high school students, as well as an award to the best overall entry. Students receive a Potters Council Student membership, a Potters Council t-Shirt, and their choice of a CeramicArtsDaily Bookstore book or DVD. Their teachers receive a Potters Council membership and a one-year subscription to Ceramics Monthly and Pottery Making Illustrated.

There was so much wonderful work, it took some time to make our decisions. In the end, we narrowed it down to four. Congratulations to our winners!

Letter from the Chair:

KEVIN CROWE, Potters Council Board Chair

At our annual meeting at NCECA, I was next in succession behind Steve Branfman as council chair. Steven is a hero of mine on so many levels, and it is a daunting honor to succeed him. Steven set the bar high for exercising smart and creative leadership with good humor. Over the years, when the Potters' Pages arrived in the mail, I suspect that like many of you, I would skim over the list of officers, board members, and staff. They were anonymous background. This past year, as chair elect, I became one of those names, and worked with board members who impressed me with the intelligence and care they bring to the task of serving all of us.

John Baymore, Lyndsay Meiklem, and Diana Pancioli left the board and will be missed. Preston Price and Evelyne Schoenmann joined the board along with Vicky Hansen as the chair elect. Preston brings his experience as an educator to the board, which includes teaching at both the high school and the college levels. Evelyne resides in Basel, Switzerland, and brings an international perspective to the Council. Vicky is the first potter I knew. She worked as an independent studio potter before taking a position as head of the ceramic program at Colorado State.

As chair I want to bring attention to the challenges faced by early career artists; a descriptor coined by John Baymore to define artists of any age, transitioning to the studio from the classroom or from a former career. Taking a close look at formal apprenticeships, informal mentoring, residencies, and the complex requirements of setting up a studio could be part of developing strategies to support this demographic in deciding what their next step will look like.

I also want to focus on ways to green our studio practices, softening our collective carbon footprint. Scrutiny of material use, firing methods, packaging and marketing systems with an eye toward sustainability will be essential in becoming more carbon responsible.

I look forward to your input on these and any issues of concern to you.

In the late 1960s, Francis Moore Lappé wrote Diet for a Small Planet, a cookbook based on hunger as a political issue. In an interview, she was asked how she stayed sane given her investment in an issue that had little, if any, popular traction. She said that she had three friends who shared her passion and commitment, and that was what kept her from feeling isolated and irrelevant. The Potters Council puts each of us in touch with those three, or 30 or 300 friends, keeping us sane and aware that what we do—and how we do it—matters. That alone is worth the price of admission.

Peace,

Kevin Crowe, Chair

Birdie Boone, Potters Council Member

Ceramic artist and educator currently living in northern New Mexico. One of my abiding philosophies is that the surface is just as important as the form. That being said, I tend to keep my forms minimal to avoid a visual contest with the glaze surface.

Belly bottomed bowls, up to 4½ in. (12 cm) in diameter, mid-range red clay, bisque slip, glaze, fired to cone 6.

process

1. Use paper templates and cookie cutters to cut out shapes from fresh clay slabs.
2. Bevel the seam edges and thin out the lip edges with a pony roller.
3. Pat the belly bottom pieces into curved forms over a plaster or bisque hump mold. Set aside to firm up.
4. Curve the walls of the cup to form a cylinder, apply magic water, and join the seams.
5. Compress the seam with the pony roller. Use a form or a curved paddle to support the back side of the seam.
6. Fold the peaks at the top seam out to create an additional design detail.
7. Flip the cylinder over and fold the rolled seam edges in. Score cylinder and belly bottom seam edges really well.
8. Use a wooden paddle to compress the seam. Since the bottom is dryer than the walls, seal the attachment well.
9. Use your fingers to stretch the wall from the inside to add volume and further define the form.
10. To make a handle with a faux seam, join two coils and roll each side with a pony roller to the desired thickness.
11. Run your fingers along each edge to reinforce the faux seam. Plump the ends between your fingers and the table.
12. Hold handle up to cup to determine if size is right, adjust if necessary, then score cup and handle well and attach.
13. Once the pot is bisque fired, apply wax resist to belly bottom, allow it to dry thoroughly.
14. Dip the piece in bisque slip and allow to dry thoroughly before glazing by dipping.
15. Glazed pots sitting in 'slump crutches', ready to be loaded into kiln for glaze firing.

Potters Council 2015 Election Results:

STEVEN BRANFMAN, Past Chair, 2015 Nominating Committee

The in-person Potters Council Advisory Board meeting which was held in conjunction with the annual NCECA conference in Providence, Rhode Island is now over, and the new Advisory Board is officially seated. Information about the election results was already released to the members who were in attendance at the annual Member's Reception, and posted on the Potters Council CeramicArtsDaily Forum Section, and now I am pleased to be able to complete my last official duty on the Board by sharing this news with you here in the Potters' Pages.

Vicky Hansen, Chair Elect

E. Preston Rice, Board Member

Evelyne Schoenmann, Board Member

The Potters Council is very pleased to announce that Vicky Hansen is the new Chair Elect. The two new Board members are E. Preston Rice and Evelyne Schoenmann, our first international member of the Advisory Board.

Steven Branfman now moves to a one year term as the Immediate Past Chair, and Kevin Crowe is the new Chair for the coming year. Retiring from terms on the Board are Diana Pancioli, Lyndsay Meiklam, and myself.

Sincere thanks go to Diana and Lyndsay for their service to the membership.

<http://ceramicartsdaily.org/potters-council/potters-council-board-members/>

Thanks also go to all of the other 2015 election candidates who offered their time and expertise to potentially give back to the membership of the Potters Council.

Writing this piece is my last official act (trailing my Board 'retirement' by a bit) as the outgoing Immediate Past Chair and the Chair of the 2015 Nominating Committee. Serving for the past four years on the Board has been an honor. Thanks to all.

Recap Potters Pages:

STEVEN BRANFMAN

Hi All, As I write this we're nearing three weeks post NCECA and I'm still in recovery mode. Decompressing from the conference and all the activities surrounding it takes a while for me, as I'm sure it does for those of you who were there. For me personally, NCECA was a whirlwind; I curated two exhibitions, hosted John Baymore in my studio or a pre-NCECA workshop, was a co-presenter of ClayStories with Owen Dearing, introduced my surgeon brother Gary for his presentation, introduced John for his presentation, did two student critique sessions, carried out my board responsibilities for the K-12 Ceramics Exhibition Foundation and the Potters Council, and hosted Karen Mahoney in my studio for a post-NCECA workshop. In between all of this I even got to attend some wonderful panels, lectures, and exhibitions. I love NCECA!!!!

From the perspective of the Potters Council, NCECA was another wonderful and successful conference. We installed our new board members, began discussion on holding a series strategic planning meetings, announced a new Potters Council award to recognize a person or organization making a difference in the clay community, selected our K-12 Exhibition award recipients, and hosted our annual Potters Council Juried Exhibition. My time spent in our booth is always rewarding talking to current and potential Potters Council members. Of course the highlight of the conference for the Potters Council is our annual Members Reception and not only was the room jam packed, but the activity, conversation, interaction, networking, socializing, and over the over-top-food spread (including make your own sundaes!) was awesome.

As we look ahead, the Potters Council is in a very strong position to continue and expand the services and benefits that we provide for you, our members. With Evelyne Schoenmann from Switzerland and our first international board member, on our board, our international outreach will also expand. Remember, the Potters Council is your organization. We on the Advisory Board are here to serve you so please, share your ideas, suggestions, kudos, and criticisms. We're all ears!

All my best for continued joy in clay.
